FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

15. Plaintiff is a sixty-one (62) year old woman who resides in the city of Fairfield, Illinois.

16. Defendants employed Plaintiff from December 1, 1996 until March 1, 2016.

17. Plaintiff is cross-trained as a correctional officer and dispatcher as are most correctional officers of the Sheriff's Department.

18. For all relevant times, Plaintiff suffered from rheumatoid arthritis, fibromyalgia, and hearing loss.

19. For all relevant times and until her termination, Plaintiff was first in seniority of all correctional officers.

20. Defendants subjected Plaintiff to derogatory harassment and unequal terms of employment based upon her sex, age, and disability. Furthermore, Defendants retaliated against Plaintiff for opposing the harassment and unequal terms of employment.

21. Defendants actions fostered a hostile and intimidating work environment. As a result of Defendants' actions, Plaintiff's work performance and health suffered substantially.

22. For instance, in June 2014, Plaintiff reported an inmate's medical issue to Chief Deputy Andy Milner ("Milner"), Plaintiff's supervisor. While discussing the issue with Milner, Correctional Officer Ranken ("Ranken"), a co-worker, accused Plaintiff of causing the medical issue by “flipping her tits” at the inmate. Milner and Ranken laughed at the comment. Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed by the conduct.

23. Plaintiff reported this incident, among others, to Defendant Sheriff Everett and Milner.

Defendant Sheriff serves as head supervisor of the Sheriff’s department and Plaintiff’s senior commander.

24. During the meeting, Milner accused Plaintiff of “flipping her tits” at the inmate as Ranken had suggested previously. Defendant Sheriff Everett and Milner both chuckled at the comment. Again, Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed by the conduct.

25. As well as reporting the comment, Plaintiff reported additional harassing behavior. More specifically, Plaintiff, along with another female correctional officer, reported harassing behavior by the male correctional guards. Plaintiff reported to her supervisors that the male guards were not completing shift duties as policy directed. Male guards routinely left cleaning duties for the women to complete. Shift duties included prepping meals, and cleaning up before and after as needed. Additionally, duties included dispensing proscribed medical to inmates.

26. After leaving the work for the female guards, male guards joked regarding how much they enjoyed leaving the mess for the women to clean up.

27. Furthermore, in the meeting, Plaintiff reported numerous instances of male guards referring to Plaintiff, and other women, as a “bitch” and other intimidating behavior.

28. Following this meeting, Plaintiff’s working conditions severely deteriorated.

29. After making her report, departmental positions came up for bid. In September 2014, Plaintiff bid on the dispatcher position that she held at the time and had done so for multiple years. Having the highest seniority, Plaintiff was entitled to the position, pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement between the parties due to her seniority.

30. Disregarding the CBA entirely, Defendant Everett segregated Plaintiff from her male coworkers by reassigning Plaintiff from dispatcher to jailer. Defendant Everett stated to Plaintiff that he made the move to “stop [her] grievances.”

31. Additionally, Defendant Everett gave the position, which Plaintiff bid on, to a younger, less experienced male correctional officer.

32. Male coworkers intensified their verbal harassment of Plaintiff in the months that followed.

33. When reporting the behavior to the Sheriff, Defendant Sheriff Everett justified the harassment, stating “those making the most money should do the most work;” directly referencing Plaintiff’s and another female guard’s seniority and age.

34. In another instance, in October 2014, two male guards harassed Plaintiff regarding Plaintiff’s August report. The men laughed at Plaintiff while calling her a “fucking lying bitch” who got “knocked off her high horse.” Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed.

35. In November 2014, Plaintiff verbally requested to serve some of her shifts as dispatcher due to her medical conditions. Sheriff Everett refused to address the request.

36. On or about November 26, 2014, Correctional Officer Curry, a coworker, withdrew his service pistol and pretends to discharge weapon in the dispatch area of the department. Plaintiff reported the incident to the Sheriff, noting that this was the third such incident in a matter of weeks. Plaintiff felt intimidated and fearful for her safety.

37. On or about December 2, 2014, Plaintiff spilled something on the floor in her work area. As she went to clean it up, a male guard openly berated Plaintiff for the minor spill. The verbal altercation became so intense that inmates attempted intervening on Plaintiff's behalf. Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed.

38. Also during December 2014, Plaintiff refused another correctional officer's order to smuggle contraband to an inmate during her shift. The correctional officer verbally accosted Plaintiff for refusing the order. Upon information and belief, the correctional officer smuggled the items to the inmate following the altercation.
39. On or about December 23, 2014, a coworker yelled "you better turn those hearing aids up" at Plaintiff. Plaintiff felt signaled out due to her disability.
40. In what should be considered another threat upon Plaintiff's safety, Correctional Officer Pope withdrew his service weapon inside the department when no threat was present. While doing so, Pope called Plaintiff's name to ensure she witnessed the action. Again, Plaintiff felt intimidated and fearful for her safety.
41. On or about January 6, 2015, Correctional Officer Curry openly berated regarding running a vehicle check. Rather than have one of the many male correctional officers positioned at the computer run the check, Curry specifically sought out Plaintiff, who was assigned to work as a jailer that day. Plaintiff felt humiliated and harassed by Curry's verbal statements and singled out from her younger, male coworkers.
42. Following the incident and due to the many instances of harassment, Plaintiff's medical condition worsened. As a result, Plaintiff requested medical accommodations on or about January 12, 2016. The Plaintiff requested to work a portion of her weekly hours in the sedentary role of dispatch. Again, Sheriff refused to accommodate the request.

43. Later that day, Correctional Officer Miller refused to aid in the preparation of meals and/or work the radio in dispatch. Miller's refusal required Plaintiff to perform tasks as both jailer and dispatcher.
44. On or about January 15, 2016, Defendants required Plaintiff to work involuntary overtime in the kitchen area. Plaintiff worked the overtime as three younger, male coworkers refused to assist in the completion of any duties. As Plaintiff exited the building at the end of her involuntary shift, the male coworkers openly mocked Plaintiff. The men found it humorous that Defendants forced Plaintiff to work over to cover the cleaning duties that the men refused to do. Plaintiff felt humiliated, embarrassed, and persecuted.
45. In a false attempt at addressing Plaintiff's complaints, Defendant Sheriff instituted a new policy regarding the use of electronics during the workday. Additionally, Defendants redistributed work duties by reallocating many of the cleaning duties to Plaintiff's shift. However, Defendant Sheriff did not enforce the policy following its enactment. Male guards continued to use electronic devices while not completing assigned duties without repercussions.
46. About a week after issuing the new policy, on or about February 17, 2015, Sheriff Everett scolded a female coworker for attempting to assist Plaintiff in completion of her newly assigned cleaning duties. The Sheriff, along with a male correctional officer, refused to allow the female guard from completing the task as it was not part of her shift duties.
47. As the duties increased, Plaintiff's health decreased. As such, Plaintiff took an increasing number of vacation days in attempts to recuperate. The male guards tracked her sick time; at times, noting to the Sheriff that Plaintiff should be running out of sick time.

48. On or about March 23, 2015, Plaintiff provided the Sheriff with a letter from her doctor limiting her work duties. Based upon the accommodations in the note, Plaintiff, again, requested to serve time at dispatch. Sheriff provided limited accommodations for a short period of time.
49. Sheriff continued to assert that no position was available to accommodate Plaintiff, or another older, female guard seeking similar accommodations. Sheriff asserted this even as he accommodated another female guard who required stronger accommodations than Plaintiff requested.
50. In March 2015, Sheriff continued to harass and retaliate against Plaintiff. This time, the department refused to include Plaintiff and another female guard, who made similar accusations of harassment and retaliation, in departmental training opportunities.
51. On or about March 24, 2015, the Defendant Sheriff sent three male correctional officers to “jail standards” training. Defendant Sheriff did so even though the men rarely served in the jailer capacity. Defendant Sheriff did not send the two women, one being the Plaintiff, who primarily served as jailers.
52. Also on or about March 24, 2015, Defendant Sheriff scheduled mandatory CPR training for all other guards. Defendant Sheriff prevented Plaintiff from attending the CPR training by scheduling her to perform other duties.
53. During April 2015, the Defendant Sheriff sent another group of male guards to “jail standards class.” Again, Defendant Sheriff did not offer the training to Plaintiff.
54. In another instance, during May 2015, Defendant Sheriff sent a group of male guards, including the Sheriff and Chief Deputy to a class regarding the use of Tasers. Defendant Sheriff did not offer the training to Plaintiff.

55. At the end of May 2015, the guards bid on positions based upon security. Again, the Plaintiff bid on a dispatcher position. Again, the Sheriff passed over the Plaintiff requiring her to continue working in the in the back as jailer.
56. On or about June 30, 2015, five or six male guards refuse to assist Plaintiff complete shift duties. Instead, the group take an extended lunch together. By doing so, the group left behind a host of unfinished duties for Plaintiff to complete single handedly.
57. On or about July 1, 2015, a male correctional guard refused to complete shift-cleaning duties. Instead, the male officer watched in amusement as Plaintiff completed the duties.
58. On or about July 7, 2015, two male correctional officers harass Plaintiff by making loud noises as she attempts to work radio call while assisting in dispatch. The men laughed as Plaintiff struggled to hear the caller. Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed as a result.
59. On or about July 21, 2015, five or six male guards go to lunch together while leaving Plaintiff alone in the department to tend to the radio and inmates.
60. At this point, the inmates, knowing the extent of the harassment endured by Plaintiff, invite Plaintiff to eat lunch with them. Plaintiff felt humiliated as she realized that she was equal to the inmates in the eyes of her male coworkers.
61. On or about July 26, 2015, two male guards refuse to clean up after serving the inmates a meal. Instead, the two guards leave the mess for Plaintiff. The same two guards did the same on or about July 28, 2015. This time, one of the men states to Plaintiff that he “loves working with you” in a demeaning tone. Plaintiff felt humiliated and embarrassed.
62. In another form of harassment/retaliation, Defendant granted special treatment to male guards. For instance, on or about August 9, 2015, Correctional Officer Miller received priority assignment to dispatch due to working a fourteen-hour shift reasoning that he got preferential assignment due to the length of his work shift. However, the following day, when Plaintiff served the same fourteen-hour shift, Defendant assigned her to work in the jail. Instead, Miller, whose shift totaled eight hours, worked dispatch over Plaintiff's objections.

63. On or about August 28, 2015, positions reopened for bid. Along with bidding on a dispatch position, Plaintiff provided a medical slip describing work limitations consistent with the dispatch position. Even though Plaintiff had seniority, Defendant Sheriff refused to grant her the position and accommodations. Rather, Defendant Sheriff gave the position to the male guard at the center of the harassment towards Plaintiff.
64. The following month, Defendant Sheriff sent written correspondence to Plaintiff stating that no position meeting her accommodations was available. As such, Defendant Sheriff called for a Fitness for Duty Examination. Defendant Sheriff put Plaintiff on paid administrative leave pending the outcome of the examination.
65. As part of the duty examination, Defendant Sheriff required he be allowed to attend medical evaluation appointment with Plaintiff. When Plaintiff refused, Defendant Sheriff sent notice of pre-disciplinary hearing against Plaintiff.
66. Prior to voting on a proposed action against Plaintiff, two members of the merit commission resign preventing a vote on disciplinary action against Plaintiff.
67. On or about April 1, 2016, Defendant stopped paying Plaintiff entirely. To date, Defendants have provided Plaintiff with no notice regarding her termination, nor the reasoning behind it. Furthermore, Defendants have not taken the matter before the appropriate merit commission or provided Plaintiff with notification of any hearing taken place on the matter.

68. The accumulation of unwanted sexual gestures and comments by Defendants and Defendants employees created a hostile and intimidating working environment in which Plaintiff felt uncomfortable working. Additionally, the unwanted comments and gestures regarding Plaintiff's gender, age, and disabilities created a hostile and intimidating working environment in which Plaintiff uncomfortable working.
69. Furthermore, younger, male employees were not subjected to the same treatment. As such, Defendants conduct, as well as that of their employees created unequal terms of employment for Plaintiff due to her sex, age, and disabilities.
70. The compilation of harassment, discrimination, and retaliation substantially interfered with Plaintiff's performance of her duties.
